

Aphasia

Bill of Rights

You have the right to:

1	Be told that you have aphasia	An icon featuring a lightbulb, a speech bubble, and a question mark. Below these symbols are two stylized faces, one purple and one grey, representing communication and thought.
2	Get it in writing	An icon showing a hand holding a yellow document with the text "YOU HAVE APHASIA" written on it. There are other colorful shapes around the document.
3	Be told about resources	An icon showing a brain with lightning bolts above it, symbolizing resources or information. Below the brain are four people sitting around a table, representing a group or community.
4	Receive therapy	An icon showing a therapist in a white coat sitting at a desk, talking to a client whose back is to the viewer.
5	Give informed consent for research	An icon showing a person in a pink shirt signing a document while another person in a dark shirt looks on.
6	Have health professionals who know how to talk to you	An icon showing a computer monitor with a seal on it and a stack of books in front of it.